

Imagine you are home alone in the middle of a zombie apocalypse. Your parents didn't mean to leave you alone but, hey! shit happens! At first, you try get along and make the best of things. After all you are fourteen and old enough to look after yourself. You live the best you can, going through the routines your mother insisted you complete to keep yourself safe. It is safe, inside the house, but inside your head it's a different story. You think about what's out there, things you haven't even encountered in your worst nightmares. You wonder what happened to your parents. You can't sleep, you imagine the worst case scenario with every little noise you hear. You even begin imagining things that don't exist. Like that noise you can hear coming from the cellar. That regular knocking (tapping?) noise. Is it in your head or is it real? There's only one way to find out, but that would mean going outside...
